Life took an unprecedented turn with the outbreak of the pandemic. Those languishing at the bottom of the social order are the ones that have been the worst hit with hardly any means to sustain and survive. Underprivileged children are facing the wrath affecting not only their present but also their future.

EMPATHY & ADAPTABILITY

The normal lifestyle took an unprecedented turn with the outbreak of the pandemic - the spread of the novel Covid-19. The pandemic has brought our lives to a standstill, with the economy in a state of absolute doldrums. This pandemic has affected every section of society, especially the poor. Those at the bottom of the social and economic order are the ones that have been the worst hit, with hardly any means to sustain and survive. Underprivileged children are sure to face the wrath of the after-effects of this global distress and it may not only affect their present but also their future.

A certain section of the deprived kids, for instance the ones who reside in care homes run by numerous NGOs or those who are under the care of the government - are bound to be affected due to the crunch in cash resulting from the reduced funds and donations triggered by the economic crisis. This will eventually affect the growth of these children, whether physically as it can lead to increased cases of malnourishment or mentally, with the bare minimum primary education they receive, also brought to a complete halt with the lockdown.

One of the core values of FHI is Empathy and the core principle of operations at FHI is Adaptability. While we acknowledged the effects of the pandemic on society, it was equally important for us to look ahead and do everything in our power to get through these tough times as well. This crisis was looked at as an opportunity to serve our partner schools and thereby the children, ensuring that we act as a support not just economically but also figuratively.

The aim is to empower our partner schools to sail through the tough tides but also to ensure the children can seamlessly adapt themselves to the new normal and also to be prepared to tackle Life post COVID.

The pandemic posed a unique situation to FHI where we got an opportunity to act and also preach about our core beliefs. With the help of our donors, we have been able to live up to the objectives of the initiative and look forward to do so in the future too.

The objective of the Covid Relief Initiative is to support our partner schools by:

- being a moral support to the Board of the School
- assisting them to keep up the Essential Resources for their operations.
- involving the Children in initiatives that drive their focus away from the pandemic and ensure that they maintain a positive outlook towards life.

THE INITIATIVES RUN BY FHI DURING THE PANDEMIC

- COVID Relief - Initiative to ensure we support the operations of our partner schools by providing them with the supply of ration and other essential commodities.
- Mentorship Program - Program that brings the Children and Working Professionals on a single platform to interact frequently with a motive to have a positive impact on one another.
- Online Life Skills Sessions - Our events resumed digitally in most of our operating cities, Life Skill education remains our primary focus.
- FHI Kalakaar - A nationwide contest, allowing children from our partner schools to showcase their talent.
